

Using the tradition of phenomenology and a process known as portraiture, in depth interviews of seven volunteer participants were conducted. While each participant's experience was unique, nâ