HOW TO START TEACHING TOUCH COURSE

By John DeMott

As a teacher of touch, I have found that the most common question I am asked is, "How do I start teaching touch?" The answer is simple: Start with the basics. Teach the fundamentals of touch, such as the importance of touch, the benefits of touch, and the basic techniques of touch. This will give your students a solid foundation for learning touch. Once they have a good understanding of the basics, you can move on to more advanced techniques and applications.

One of the most important things to teach is the importance of touch. Many people do not realize how important touch is to our lives. Touch is a natural part of human interaction and is essential for our physical, emotional, and spiritual well-being. Teach your students that touch is not just a physical act, but a powerful tool for connection and healing.

Next, teach the benefits of touch. There are many benefits to touch, including reducing stress, improving mood, and increasing self-esteem. Teach your students that touch can be used to help others feel better and to improve their own lives. This will give them a strong motivation to learn and practice touch.

Finally, teach the basic techniques of touch. This includes the importance of touch, the benefits of touch, and the basic techniques of touch. Teach your students how to use touch to connect with others and to help them feel better. This will give them the skills they need to be successful in their touch practice.

Teaching touch is a rewarding experience. It allows you to share your knowledge and skills with others and to help them feel better. By starting with the basics and teaching the fundamentals of touch, you can help your students learn and practice touch effectively. This will give them the skills they need to be successful in their touch practice.
